NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 25.—It is now thought that the number of people who lost their lives by shipwreck and disaster attending the West Indian hurricane which passed up the coast ten days ago will reach 100. Accidents in many respects conflicting continue to occur. In the Albemarle and Pamlico sound region, and the coast from Hatteras to Boyd's is not, in which section the greater number of casualties occurred. As this section of water is the artery for small craft from the region tributary to Chesapeake bay and as far north as Philadelphia and south to Georgia, the number of vessels traversing these inlets is very great.

Masters of craftsman said that region state that all schooners, pungies, sloops and fishing craft wrecked ashore, broken up, sunk or turned over are to be seen almost hourly in a trip through the sounds and it is thought that the total drowned will run close to one hundred if it does not even reach it.

One Swan, Hog and other islands in the vicinity of Portsmouth, Big and Little Pine, were completely destroyed, fully 60 to 70 houses, four or five churches and numerous stores, barns and warehouses were either washed away or damaged beyond repair. As a result numbers are homeless and destitute and many others have lost crops and flocks. Stocks are implements and the fishing interest have suffered greatly. In a few days, fairly complete report can be made but at present rumors, swindling true statements and an accurate footing of the damage can not be reached.

EXCITING SCENES.

A Skirmish in the Dreyfus Court-Martial Trial Entirely Favorable to Defendant.

DISPLAY OF MILITARY CLANNISHNESS.

Fierce Battle Between M. Labori and Gens. Mercier, Roget, Gonse, De Boisdeffre and Col. Jouan.

Whenever Gen. Mercier Was Cornered by Capt. Dreyfus' Attorney, He Declined to Answer, and Col. Jouan invariably supported him.

RESSES, Aug. 25.—Thursday's session of the Dreyfus court-martial was marked by one of the most exciting scenes of the trial. The proceedings opened with a skirmish entirely favorable to the defense, over Col. Maurel, president of the court-martial of 1894, who admitted reading one of the secret documents of the court which had not been seen by the defense. He protested that only one document was needed, al- leging that this sufficed to enable him to form a conviction that he could not be accused.

This protest made matters worse because, as M. Labori pointed out, if he persisted in it was his bounden duty to persevere. Col. Jouan upheld Col. Maurel in his refusal to indicate the name of the defendant he read, but M. Labori announced that he would summon Capt. Freystatier, another member of the tribunal of 1894, and get his version of what then passed behind the backs of the counsel of the defense. Col. Maurel felt his position keenly and continually hesitated before replying to Labori's questions. This is all he ever did, but he was only partially successful in the battle that ensued between M. Labori and Col. Jouan, the latter receiving reinforcements from Gen. Roget, Gen. Gonse and Gen. De Boisdeffre, as well as invaluable assistance from Col. Jouan himself.

M. Labori took Gen. Mercier over the whole ground of his previous deposition. This led to several sharp passages at arms between the advocate and Col. Jouan, who upheld Mercier in his refusal to reply to several questions which, in the general opinion of those in the courtroom, were distinctly pertinent.

Whenever Gen. Mercier was cornered he declined to answer, and Col. Jouan invariably supported him. M. Labori protested most energetically. His words and manner breached the deep indignation, but the president of the tribunal was unmoved.

The impression of Gen. Gonse,

Roget and De Boisdeffre and Maj. Lauth, who in rapid succession mounted the stage or rose in their seats and interposed remarks, was very exciting and carried the spectators along on a wave of breathless interest. One after the other of these officers, who were Thursday in full uniform, would jump up and cry, "I demand to be heard!" and without further waiting ascend the steps of the platform to begin a tirade of abuse, shouting like a wild officer. Sometimes four officers were on the stage at the same moment. It was a marvelous display of military clamor.

At one time a perfect babel of voices reigned for several minutes until Col. Jouan intervened and restored order. M. Labori's cross examination was successful so far as it went, but Col. Jouan, who had been the chief witness of the defense, was not impressed by his adversary.

Gen. Mercier faced Labori's fire with calm determination, and the platoons, with hands behind his back, held his face only half turned toward his questioner. Once or twice a savage look in the eyes, an elevation in the tone, and a swaying to and fro of the body revealed the inner fires of resentment. Gen. Roget faced the court with an air of unblushing effrontry. His handsome, but unsympathetic, features expressed the bitterest scorn as he spun around on his heel and with an air of contempt labori or the audience.

Bakers' Bread.

The bakers' bread of today is not the bakers' bread of twenty years ago. Science and study has developed this food product more than any other manufactured article of consumption. The F. H. Traxel Company of this city is now the leading bread bakers of this section, simply because they have given study and close attention for years to making Bread that will please the public. Even now there is an impression that prevails among the few that bakers' bread is unwholesome and unfit for family use. We will admit that there are many bakers who make their bread the same as their forefathers did years ago, and hence this impression is justifiable to those who never had an opportunity to get Bread made by modern processes and by bakers who thoroughly understand how to make Bread that will be praised for its merits. The F. H. Traxel Co. has done its share to supply this section, enabling people to get Bread that will meet with every requirement. We make the assertion that this Bread will meet with every requirement because we have evidence of it, and the evidence is the increasing demand whenever sold.
